Today's News - October 12, 2004

This week on ArcSpace: Lab architecture in Beijing, and Mau's "Massive Change" in Vancouver (we forgot to link yesterday). — Another RFP from LMDC for WTC site work. — We'll get the vitriol over with first: Farrelly doesn't mince words about a new development down under: "dead-flesh developer-plastic...a poetic opportunity dramatically and deliberately missed." — In the U.K., "towering egos" instead of experts for CABE? — Kerry mayor blames architects for bad planning. — But ugly buildings may be a thing of the past in Northern Ireland's future. — What master think should be done with Edinburgh's St. James Centre (the building everyone loves to hate). — Study shows there's a big future for iconic architecture (and "zoomorphic" architecture will become passé). — Designing for security is hurting the livability factor of American cities. — A workshop about creating livable neighborhoods. — Christmas comes early to NYC: $1 billion grant for affordable housing. — Glasgow "braces" itself for a Hadid-designed museum, and things are looking up for her Guggenheim Taichung. — Korea's newest museum boasts big architects (not usually known for their "modest and tastefully subdued design"). — Two calm (or are they boring?) buildings tame Cambridge, U.K. — Major software company opts for LEED-green HQ in downtown Toronto. — Web site awards have an international flavor. — A Canadian firm claims a novel approach to managing projects.

To subscribe to the free daily newsletter click here

Lab architecture studio: Soho Shang Du, Beijing
Exhibition: "Massive Change: The Future of Global Design," Vancouver Art Gallery,
Vancouver BC, Canada

Request for Proposals: Institutional Planning Services for the Memorial Center and related aspects of the World Trade Center Memorial and Cultural Program; deadline: November 1 [link to pdf]- Lower Manhattan Development Corporation

Mediocrity spoils another view: A major development [Honeysuckle] fails to do Newcastle justice. We've always known Sydney couldn't plan its way out of a paper bag...if the architecture were other than regulation dead-flesh developer-plastic...a poetic opportunity dramatically and deliberately missed. By Elizabeth Farrelly- Sydney Morning Herald

Towering egos: It's a disgrace that none of the candidates to run architecture's watchdog has any real knowledge of the subject, argues Deyan Sudjic - Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment (Cabe)- Observer (UK)

Kerry's mayor attacks architects: ...defended the role of local councillors in the planning process..."Architects have an awful lot to answer for"...many of the worst aspects of planning are attributed to architects and their designs.- Unison (Ireland)

Beauty to be in the eye of the planner: Ugly buildings may become a less common feature of Northern Ireland in future...- Belfast Telegraph (Ireland)

A new vision for the capital's carbuncle: We asked leading architects and others about what they think could be done with the building the capital loves to hate [Edinburgh's St James Centre]. - Allan Murray; Terry Farrell; David MacDonald/Cockburn Association; Peter Wilson/Manifesto Foundation for Architecture; Malcolm Fraser-The Scotsman (UK)

Future sees return of icons: Crystal-ball-gazing study predicts 5 million new homes, a London 'megopolis' and 24-hour cities in 20 years...purveyors of iconic design can rest easy in the knowledge that cities all over Britain will show a "renewed vigour" for iconic buildings. [link to full report]- BD/Building Design (UK)

Hunkering Down: How Security Measures Are Hurting Cities: "The war against terrorism threatens to become a war against the livability of American cities..." By Philip Langdon - David Dixon/Goody, Clancy & Associates- Hartford Courant (Connecticut)

How to Turn a Place Around workshop: Creating Great Nighborhood Spaces - October 28-29, New York City: course shows step-by-step approach to revitalization- Project for Public Spaces

New York to Win Record $1 Billion Grant For Affordable Housing: Enterprise Foundation...donation is aimed at helping the mayor with his $3 billion New Housing- New York Sun

Z marks the spot for transport museum's journey into the future: Zaha Hadid has been chosen to mastermind one of Scotland's most prestigious museum projects...Glasgow is bracing itself for the arrival of one of Hadid's avante-garde designs...- The Herald (UK)

Taiwan moves a step closer to its Guggenheim Taichung: ...would be part of a new district to include a City Hall designed by Frank Gehry and an opera house by Jean Nouvel. - Zaha Hadid- The Art Newspaper

Big architects, big art, big buzz at Leeum, Samsung Museum of Art: Despite all of the hype and hoopla...it is modest and tastefully subdued. - Mario Botta; Jean Nouvel; Rem Koolhaas- Korea Herald

Taming the zoo: Unexciting, say the dons, but two calm buildings by Allies & Morrison restore sanity to Cambridge. "...surely after the anti-social posturings of Stirling and Foster that is a virtue." [images]- BD/Building Design (UK)

Firm pays premium to be on green fringe: SAS Institute opts to stay downtown and build its own 'green' head office...on the fringe of downtown Toronto - NORR; Giffels Design-Build- Globe and Mail (Canada)

Hillier awarded Gold Medal in 2004 Architecture Web Site Awards: Honor Awards to Urban Office Architecture, d'arch, TEK (Thanhauser Esterson Kapell), Gernot Schulz Architects- Entablature

When the boss has to take orders from the employee: Young + Wright Architects has a novel way of managing projects: One of its staff acts for the client. It makes for lively discussion- Globe and Mail (Canada)

Note: Pages will open in a new browser window. External news links are not endorsed by ArchNewsNow.com. Free registration may be required on some sites. Some pages may expire after a few days.

Yesterday's News

© 2004 ArchNewsNow.com